

Appellate

OVERVIEW

Clients value our ability to prepare for and to navigate the complex appellate process in New Mexico and the Tenth Circuit. When the stakes are high, our clients involve Modrall Sperling's seasoned appellate lawyers sooner rather than later.

By its nature, appellate litigation is different from litigation in the trial courts, and therefore requires a different set of skills geared for an audience of appellate judges.

Our appellate lawyers do not merely draft and argue cases in the appellate courts. We help clients and their trial lawyers to prepare for appellate review from the outset of litigation. We consult with them to identify and develop the legal theories most likely to bring success in the appellate courts. We draft pre-trial motions, and assist at trial, to preserve those issues for appeal.

We also draft and argue post-judgment motions, negotiate favorable settlements on appeal when appropriate, and draft and file amicus curiae briefs on issues of interest to our clients.
